THE FOREWORD

Realizing the happiness of these school days, the importance of perpetuating their memory not only for our own class but for classes of a future date, we, the Mirror staff, publish this book. It is our hope that the Mirror will amuse and entertain you, and above all that in the days to come it will recall happy memories, experiences, and once familiar faces.

The voices of that hearth are still;
Look where we may, the wide earth o'er
Those lighted faces smile no more."

DEDICATION

MISS HARRIET FLAGG

We, the class of 1958, dedicate this annual to Miss Flagg with deep appreciation for all that she has done in preparing many of the Seniors for future work in the business world. As the years pass we surely will appreciate even more her efforts to make us able and knowing citizens.

IN MEMORIAM

ALBERT ROBINS

On June 18, 1957, we lost one of the most loyal and valuable members of the class of '58. A helpful member of many dance decorating committees, Al was director of the lighting committee for the Christmas, Dramatic Club, and Talent shows during his Freshman, Sophomore, and Junior years. In his sophomore year he was vice president of the Audio-Visual Club.

Al was a quiet boy and a good student, especially in accounting, his favorite subject. Although he was not a member of a school team, Al liked sports, particularly hunting. He numbered Bob Ramsey, Jack Holland, and Art Schaufus among his closest friends, but we all miss his quiet willingness and cheerfulness.

"May he rest in peace . . ."

JOHN W McDEVITT
SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS

In extending congratulations to the Senior Class in behalf of your School Department and considering the times in which you leave us, may I submit a paraphrasing of an eloquent message recently given by the University of Iowa.

In this particular time of your educational career, a new apprehension pervades the world of free men. It is caused by little moons, silently orbiting the earth in space, visible at times to the naked human eye. They are moons of apprehension, not because mortal men made them and launched them from the earth, but because the men who did it are not similarly free. The moons are moons of the reality we had preferred not to believe-- the intelligence of tyranny.

Because the moons are there, real and undeniable, there is risk that free men will wish to measure the strengths of freedom as they now measure the strengths of tyranny, in things like little moons alone. That could be a fatal error. For the ultimate strength of free men over tyrants lies in the depth and breadth of education, which is greater than the capacities of science, and in wisdom, which is more than learning.

As you leave Waltham High School, let us remember that the little moons of men today are sustained by the same Infinite and Creative Force which made the earth in which we live. We may launch a million little moons, if we will, each to be caught up and ordered by laws we know yet cannot understand. But it is the promise of the Creator, denied by tyrants and withheld from slaves, which is the solid rock of freedom's strength.

The ultimate supremacy of free men will not be found in outer space; it will be found in inner conscience.

FOREIGN STUDENTS AT WALTHAM HIGH . . .

PAOLO ARDENTI MORINI

Hi Gang,

Coming from the far city of Parme, Italy, to the States and in particular to Waltham has certainly been a stimulating experience. It is extremely interesting and exciting to discover how different and at the same time how similar life in the U.S. is to that in Italy. Of course, one does not usually notice the pecularities of a way of life he knows little about, and so I saw with surprise the informal relations between the teachers and students, the heavy traffic on the roads, the great liberties teen-agers enjoy within their families, and the work they usually do after school. I often heard it said that Americans were friendly, but only upon coming to the States did I find how kind and sociable you really are. You have made this year at Waltham High one of the most wonderful and pleasant of my life, and I am quite sure that I will remember the States, Waltham, and all of you with nostalgia.

ROLF WEBER

Coming from a foreign country you are often asked, "How do you like America?" In the first few weeks that question is very difficult to answer because one has so many strange and different impressions. It takes some time to learn to understand Americans; but when one does understand them, he cannot help but like them.

At first I did not understand your school system. I thought the one in Switzerland was better, but the longer I was in your school, the more I realized that a difference in organization does not necessarily mean difference in quality. I like the school very much and have spent a wonderful year here.

Thank you, everyone, for your hospitality and help.

WALTHAM STUDENTS IN EUROPE

One of our 1957 American Field Service Exchange Students, Bill Meserve, spent the summer in Athens, Greece. After sailing from Montreal on June 22, Bill arrived in Rotterdam, Holland. A two-day train ride took him through Holland, Switzerland, Germany, and Italy with stops at Milan and Venice. He sailed from Venice on July 4th and arrived in Piroeur, Greece, three days later.

Bill was warmly welcomed by his family, Mr. and Mrs. Christos Nicolopoulos, their son, John, their daughter Hihi, and their maid Touls. After a very enjoyable summer during which he learned many of the Greek customs and much of the Greek culture, Bill returned to the United States by way of Paris, France, and Keflavik, Iceland.

Having been thoroughly indoctrinated with the Greek customs and habits and greatly impressed with the Greek people, Bill declared, "I will always be an American first, but a Greek second."

WILLIAM MESERVE

Visiting France from W.H.S. was Arnold Rosenfeld, our second A.F.S. Summer Exchange Student. Arnie accompanied Bill to Rotterdam, where he boarded a train for Paris. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Marin and their five children, Bernoit, Olivier, Elizabeth, Manuel, and Anne welcomed Arnie and escorted him to their farm which was to be his home for the summer. During Arnie's enlightening and enjoyable summer he toured through Le Mans, Blois, and Laval, ending his journey in Paris where he and the other American exchange students stayed at Cite Universitaire and visited the renowned Parisian sites. Arriving at Rotterdam on August 31, he set out for home with his companions on the T/S Arosa Kulm. Arnie feels that one has to live with the French people in order to understand and appreciate their feelings.

America—HAPPY LAND

America's made of a mixture of races,
People who come from faraway places.
We work together and play some too.
And I have often wondered who
Is at fault in this world of tensions
For creating so many crucial dissensions.
My butcher is Russian; my tailor Arabian;
My neighbor is French; my teacher Canadian;
My baker is Swedish; my grocer Spanish;
My lawyer is Irish; my doctor Danish.
We all get along as fine as can be,
So why can't the world do as well as we?

SENIOR CLASS POEM — 1958

A CLOAK FOR AMERICA

I weave a cloak for thee, my America,
I spin it of moonbeams and gossamer and twinkling stars,
I spin it of dreams and hopes and refuge,
And my loom turns and turns, spinning, spinning.

My cloak takes form; its fibers come from the blazing South,
Where darkies chant in the dusty fields;
Its colors from the golden West,
Where plains of shimmering wheat stretch endlessly;
Its coolness springs from the North,
Where tall pines gently sway, whispering softly in the night,
And its heritage shall come from the East,
Where first you were born, thou model of freedom.

I weave a cloak for thee, my America,
And in its depths are many things;
A war in which your youth gave their lives to preserve thee, great nation,
And in my cloak their blood shall be spun;
Young lovers free to plan and dream in a land of opportunity,
And in my cloak their hopes shall be spun.

My cloak shall sing lusty praises of you, oh mighty country,
Praises of your four freedoms, true Democracy;
A church steeple, a newspaper, a home free from want,
a fearless people;
All these shall be woven into my garment.

And so my cloak is finished.
I shall clothe you in all your glorious splendor.
Arise then, my country; stand proud,
For you have achieved renown, not through hate, but love;
My cloak is a mantle of love.

CLASS HISTORY — 1958

As bright and colorful as the autumn foliage were the different members of our class as they stepped through the open portals of our future Alma Mater, Waltham Senior High School. After several weeks of groping in the labyrinth of corridors, our uneasiness was lightened when we were accepted as part of the school by our upperclassmen, who honored us at the Sophomore Get-Acquainted Dance.

Our football team had quite a successful year in 1955, with five wins and two losses. The Sophomore Class was represented by ten promising players.

Having become better acquainted with our fellow students, we then chose those who we considered would direct us more capably through our first year at W.H.S. Elected were Lawrence Schmitt, president; Eleanor Ohnemus, with Carol Failla, and Sussanne McIvor, vice president, secretary, and treasurer respectively.

April showered fame upon our Richard McElhiney and Virginia Hills, who played feature roles in the Dramatic Club play, More Than Meets the Eye, under the direction of Mr. Richard Dwyer of the English Department.

Climaxing our opening year at W.H.S. was the Sophomore Hop.

Embarking upon our junior year at W.H.S., our main objective now was to elect class officers. At the conclusion of a spirited campaign, the ballots were cast and counted in favor of a second term for Lawrence Schmitt as president, ably assisted by Edmund Wiker, Carol Failla, and Jane Neville as vice president, secretary, and treasurer respectively.

Our predominantly Junior Class football team, co-captained by our own Tom Taranto, won five of its nine games in 1956.

Prominent members of our class were recipients of various merit awards during our junior year. Eleanor Ohnemus and Frances Cotton were first prize winners in the Kingsbury Temperance Fund Essay Contest. For his scholastic record, William Meserve received the coveted Harvard Book award presented yearly to a worthy junior. Virginia Hills was selected as a delegate to Girls' State and also as a representative to the Red Cross Convention in Andover. The National Honor Society, significant of laudable service, leadership, citizenship, and scholarship, willingly accepted eighteen of our fellow classmates. William Meserve and Arnold Rosenfeld were chosen by the American Field Service to represent our city and high school in Greece and France during the summer of 1957.

Lois Emerson and Jane Mulcahy were chosen by the Executive Council to be the junior cheerleaders for the hockey team. "Rocky" Daigle, John McDevitt, Herb Gallagher, John Krol, Norm Marshall, Burt Mullen, Eddie Ryan, Fred Durkin, and Larry Schmitt were our representatives on the hockey squad.

Mr. Joseph Hall directed Salad Days, the Dramatics Club play, featuring Gail Andersen, Carolyn Krosnick, and Roberta Rose.

The basketball team, the first since 1950 to participate in the Tech Tourney, was greatly strengthened by the junior delegation consisting of Steve Ballas, Jim Dennis, Bob Lazarus, Bill Stern, Bill Meserve, and Arnie Rosenfeld. Steve broke the all-time Waltham High scoring record for a single season by scoring 443 points.

The gala event of our second year at W.H.S. was the Junior Prom. Under the chairmanship of Arnold Rosenfeld, the gym was transformed into a dreamy "Fantasia" on the cold night of February 15, 1957.

After two years of drudgery and toil, laughter and reward, we looked forward to our senior year with an enthusiasm which none of the one hundred and eight graduating classes before us had experienced. We moved to the new school on Lexington Street. One unfortunate circumstance arose in the new building; we were as lost in the maze of corridors as were our underclassmen.

Our first official act as seniors was to elect the Student Council officers. Victorious were William Meserve, president; William Stern, boys' vice president; Eleanor Ohnemus, girls' vice president; and Gail Hamilton, secretary-treasurer. Immediately following this, the election for class officers was conducted. Joseph Craig became president, assisted by Elizabeth Porretta, Margaret Carruthers, and Stephanie Zampitella as vice president, treasurer, and secretary respectively.

Jane Neville and Roberta Rose were appointed as co-editors-in-chief of the 1957-58 This Week at Waltham High column, and Burt Mullen was appointed editor-in-chief of the 1958 Mirror by Mr. Sheehy, our headmaster.

Led by captains Jim Falzone, Tom Taranto and Ed Wiker, we had a very successful football season, winning six games, tying one, and losing one. Climaxing the season, Paul Connolly was chosen to be on the All-American Schoolboy football team. Cheering our eleven to victory were Gail Hamilton, captain, Gail Andersen, Virginia Hills, Eleanor Ohnimus, and Esther Peel.

The weeks preceding the awe-inspiring Senior Class Play, The Bat, had enveloped Waltham High School in an air of mystery. Under the faculty direction of Mr. Gerard Belliveau, Peggy Durkee, Jean Ewalt, and Burt Mullen in the starring role helped to make the show an overwhelming success.

Co-captained by Steve Ballas and Jim Dennis, the basketball team compiled a commendable record of eleven victories out of seventeen games, defeating Newton twice and gaining third place in the Suburban League standings. Steve Ballas broke the individual scoring record by tallying 32 points in a single game at Brockton.

Larry Schmitt captained our hockey team throughout a good season, featured by victories over B.C. High and Watertown. Seniors were elected to the faithful cheering squad. They were Joanne Fahey, Patricia Ferro, Judith Kelley, and Nancy Woodman.

William Meserve attended the annual Brotherhood Breakfast of the Jewish War Veterans at the Sheraton-Plaza Hotel in Boston. The faculty and student body elected Jane Neville as recipient of the Daughters of the American Revolution Award. William Stern's essay on I Speak for Democracy ranked fourth highest in the state among 5300 entries. LeRoy Prophet was chairman of the Exchange Day Committee. LeRoy and his committee visited Norton High on March 3, and Norton High came here on March 13. Carol Failla and Judith Kelly were our candidates for the March of Dimes Queen.

The Senior Prom on the evening of May 23 was a beautiful finale to three wonderful years at W.H.S., and graduation has come too soon after all our work and pleasure. This period of time has been the most rewarding and beneficial era of our lives. Here we have formed lasting friendships. We sincerely appreciate the efforts of Mr. Sheehy and the faculty on our behalf. As we receive our diplomas, we feel that we have left a noble and worthy record to succeeding classes. Now the doors of Waltham High School close behind us, and we can only say that as we go out into the world we wish our Alma Mater continued progress and success throughout the years.

CLASS WILL — 1958

It is with unaccustomed trepidation and a somewhat unexpected melancholy that we, the Senior Class, terminate our high school career and depart, laden with happy memories of our stay at Waltham High School. While in this reflective and gift-giving mood, we, the Class of 1958, do hereby make, publish, and declare this our last will and testament, making no mention of our mental state and capacity.

Because of non-payment of our just debts and the deep scar left upon our conscience, we leave in part payment these, our last earthly possessions.

To Mr. Sheehy 347 thank-you notes expressing our sincere appreciation for his patience and aid in piloting us through these three wonderful years.

To Mr. May, we leave a "little blue man" to run around and get the attention of the students for the reading of the daily announcements.

To Mr. Hood, we bequeath a room wall-papered with portraits of old Samuel Johnson and enchanting Eustacia Vye.

To Mr. Morang, a set of ever-lighted Bunsen burners for the benefit of his few fearful female students.

We leave to Miss Flagg our gratitude for the excellent guidance and advice that she has so willingly given us throughout our high school careers.

To Mrs. Keenan we leave a galley of sophomore slaves to serve "the purpled ones" at her coming Saturnalian festivals.

To Mr. Perkins we leave a jet-propelled ejection seat to facilitate his escape from reckless Driver Road students.

To Mrs. Goldings, we bequeath another "Alan" who will be sure to call her by her correct name.

To our efficient office secretaries, Miss Murray and Mrs. Slaman, leave Wolley Segap to answer their ever-ringing telephones.

To Mr. Belliveau, we leave a new crew of anxious intellectuals who will hang on his every word, whether it be in Latin, Greek, French, or Spanish.

A Pick the Sick machine to single out the hypochrondriacs from the truly stricken is our present to Miss Coughlin, our ever-ready nurse.

Our present to Miss Bliss is a treasured old Kentucky recipe for submarine sandwiches.

A self-dissecting Python rock snake named Smiley is our gift to Mr. Eames. Smiley should be a time-saving addition to any biology laboratory.

To Mr. Zeno and Mr. O'Brien we leave eleven ferocious red and white wildcats.

To Miss Daily, we leave a book entitled How to Cope with Eccentric Newspaper Editors.

To the Junior Class, we leave the incoming neophytes, next year's sophomores, to do with as they will.

To the sophomores we leave the memory of a model class, the Class of 1958.

As Co-Executors of this will and testament we appoint Miss Frost, Mrs. Dunbrack, and Mr. Neylon.

In Witness Whereof we have hereunto set our hand this eleventh day of June in the year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and fifty-eight.

CLASS PROPHECY — 1958

Fernleaf J. Fabian, calling headquarters—come in, come in! I wish to report on the strangest event that has ever occurred during my lifetime! Last night, while reading through the latest governmental report on space travel, I began to feel a strange whirling sensation. A fog-like darkness gradually crept over me, and I found myself suddenly in what appeared to be a world of the future. Anxious to discover what had happened to me, I made a frantic dash to the News-Tribune office. I whizzed around the corner of Pine Street and stopped dead in my tracks. There stood a dazzling, dome-shaped building topped by an enormous sign, The St. Germaine Sun. A great cheering crowd was swarming around the steps of the building, and newspapers were flying in wild abandon. I managed to grab a paper, and, turning to the front page, I read "JOE O'HARA ELECTED MAYOR OF WALTHAM." The paper was dated November 23, 1980. That was the key, but a strange feeling seemed to compel me to try to learn more about this world of the future. The first thing to do was to hail a taxi. Suddenly, as if my thoughts had been intercepted, a blimp-shaped object, bearing the sign "Fred Durkin's Dynamo Drive," screeched to a stop at my feet. "Boston!" I ordered, as we blasted off in a cloud of dust. In minutes we pulled up before the spectacular Colborne Clinic, which my driver, Vincent D'Amicus, informed me had been built and designed by the Ardenti Morini and Andrews Construction Company. As I approached this imposing building, I noticed a small placard which had been cemented into the cornerstone. Whipping out my trusty magnifying glass, I peered at the inscription, which read, "Chief Surgeon—Dr. Joseph Craig, Head of Department of Dentistry—Dr. Gail Freedman; Co-Chiefs of Research—Richard Carter and Normand Brigandi; Staff Secretaries—Betty Poretta and Audrey Hemphill." Realizing that my time in this new world would probably be very short, I decided not to stop here but to go on. My "taxi" had disappeared, but I was lucky enough to spot Virginia Connelly in her supersonic Vedsel and to persuade her to drive me to the nearest space-sport. On the way, she informed me that our former exchange student, Rolf Weber, had just been awarded the Nobel Prize for his great research in the field of Technology, and that he and John Waugh were developing plans for a research center at the South Pole. We finally arrived at the Mazzone-MacLellan Space-port, where I had time for only a brief "so long." Overwhelmed with enthusiasm, I bombed up to the reservation desk and asked Pat Girard for a seat on the earliest flight to New York. When I learned that I was to fly in a rocket, I was rather dubious. My fears were allayed, however, upon discovering that Midge Carruthers, famed aviatress, was to be the pilot, and Carol Zoeler and Claire Conrad the stewardesses. When I boarded the "Schonfus 980," developed and perfected by the great scientific team of James Andrada and Raymond Richard, I was greeted by Roberta Rose, famed world traveler. I also bumped into Stanley Lowell, noted safari leader and professional hunter, who was on his way to Africa to search for the Connerney Expedition, which had disappeared six months ago. The trip was indeed a swift one, and I soon found myself in the great metropolis of the world, New York City. Before leaving the Space Terminal, I picked up a Hamilton Gazette and read of the latest diplomatic ball given by that brilliant social light, Eleanor Ohnemus, in honor of His Distinguished Majesty, Arnold Rosenfeld, who had recently returned from Saudi Arabia. Flipping to the sports page, I read that Steve Ballas had just been awarded a fifty thousand dollar bonus by the Celtics for scoring one hundred and fifty points in their biggest game, and that Matthew Rutkowski had just returned to the United States after swimming the English Channel, blindfolded. Thinking that it would be best to outfit myself in the latest style, I headed for Macy's, hoping to pick up a few bargains. As I strolled through this maze of merchandise, I noticed a flurry of excitement in the general direction of the Fashion Department. This could only mean a fashion show, and, being an inquisitive male, I joined in with the crowd to watch the proceedings. Well, you can imagine my surprise when I saw that the commentator was none other than Marie Connelly. She was in the process of describing one of the latest items in the fabulous Mary Clare collection, which was being modelled by Diane Bari. Anxious to get on with my shopping, I headed for the Men's Department. In my great rush, I nearly collided with Nancy Woodman and Joan Dickson, who were directing the placement of the masterpieces for their forthcoming art exhibition. I finally reached the Men's Department, and after outfitting myself from head to toe in the latest fashions, I headed back to the Space Terminal eager to go to Washington to see how the years had affected the old Capital. As I disembarked from the Campbell Comet at Washington Terminal, I recognized Ken Burgess and Dave Berglund, my old buddies from W.H.S., just climbing into the latest development in motor vehicles, the Ryan Radar Rider. When I hailed them and found that they were headed for the same place as I, I asked them for a lift. In a matter of minutes we glided up in front of the newly-organized Septagon. Dave informed me that the plans for reorganization had been developed by that great lawyer, diplomat, and politician. William Meserve, and that the staff of the Septagon was under the direction of Admiral James A. Dennis and Major General Robert Ellis. Their new Joint Chiefs of Staff consisted of General Edward Range, Chairman; Admiral Vincent Flynn, Chief of Naval Operations; General Steven Walton, Commandant of the Marine Corps; General Romeo Cardillo, Air Force Chief of Staff; and General James White, Chief of Staff of the Army. I was ushered into the office of the Secretary to the Assistant Secretary of the Head of the Missiles Development Program, Stephanie Zampitella, where I was given a roll of red tape. After I had snipped away for a while, Stephanie told me that I would be taken on a tour through the Septagon. My guide was Larry Grenier, an ex-traveling salesman who turned guide in order to save shoe leather. Our first stop was the office of the Head of the Foreign Relations Department, William Stern. Bill was busy dictating his speech, "I Speak for Democracy," to his secretary, Judy Foster. Deciding not to interrupt Bill, we continued on to the Department of Agricultural Research, headed by Peter Mabie. Peter was in conference with the renowned agriculturist, Robert St. Germaine, and the expert on dairy development, Stanley Youngquist, so we were unable to speak to him. Since we were not having too much luck in getting to see these internationally known figures, we decided to make one last stop at the newest department in the Septagon—The Department of Social Work. The situation, however, had not changed, for we found that the head of the department, Jane Mulcahy, was delivering a lecture on the latest developments in teaching to members of her staff, Natalie Peterson, Nancy Boudrot, Patricia Cole, Sue McIvor, Francis Cotton, and Nancy Putnam. Not wanting to waste any more time, I thanked my guide for his trouble and wound my way out of the Septagon and back to the terminal. It was there that I ran into Charles Murphy, who was about to take off for Florida in his private plane. He offered to take me along, so we boarded the plane and set out for the land of sunshine. We arrived in Miami early that evening and decided to attend the premier performance of "Pal Eddy" at the fabulous Collagan Cabana owned by the heiress, Sheila Collagan. The show, written and directed by that great team of D'Angio and Donnelly, and starring the queen of musical comedy, Ginja Hills, and the king of stage and screen, Bobby Brown, was a smashing success! The hair styling, done by Lea Brown, and the sets, designed by Janet Dillon and Donna Wedge, also helped in making this spectacular production the best that had ever played in the history of the Collagan Cabana. That night, we stayed at the glorious Anderson Arms, the tourist paradise, newly opened by Gail Andersen, head of Miami's tourist council.

The next morning, as I dashed down to the lobby to pay my bill, I had a head on collision with that noted novelist, Jane P. Neville. Jane had stopped off at Miami with her staff of secretaries, Shirley Tuccio, Mary Farrell, Pat Barnicle, and Claudette Belliveau, before leaving for New Orleans, to cover the arrival of the first space ship from Mars.

Spaceship from Mars! Ah . . . that sounded exciting! So, true to my snoopy nature, I decided to head immediately for the bayou country. I phoned for an "Antonuccio Atomic Auto," sped to the McPhee Missile Base, boarded the newest missile, built by the David DeWolf Dynamo Company, and blasted off for Louisiana. I reached my destination with plenty of time to spare, and after a few phone calls, had hired ace photographer William Penney and famous speed stenographer, Loretta Googins, to assist me in recording this world-shattering event—the visit from Martians. As we approached downtown New Orleans, my team and I noticed many famous personalities standing about, also awaiting the arrival of the space ship. Among these outstanding people were Barbara Lawler, first Waltham woman ever to hold the office of Secretary of the Treasury, and Ruth-Linda Weiner, known as the Madame Curie of the modern medical world. We also spotted the famous woman lieutenant-commander of the Navy, Priscilla Morrow, who was chatting with the head of the Navy's Spaceship Development Program, Commodore Robert Mancuso. The spaceship was due in five minutes; suddenly an overwhelming power seemed to say to me, "Go West, young man! Go West!" Following the strange command, I rushed to the nearest spaceport, only to find that, because of the awaited arrival of the space ship, all flights had been cancelled. My only other alternative was to go by water, since all land transportation had also been cancelled. I arrived at the seaport just as a supersonic sub was being loaded. After purchasing a ticket from Claire Conrad, I boarded the sub and started off through the watery depths to a destination unknown. By talking to the captain, Edward Allen, and one of the crew members, Donald Lucas, I learned that our first stop-off would be Galveston. I decided that that was far enough west for me and prepared to disembark. We soon submerged and headed for port. It was great to breathe fresh air again, and even better to see an old buddy from school days, Tom McGann. He had just bought the latest in travel, the SpencerCycle, a high powered motorcycle, built by the Eugene Spencer Speed Company, and, as he was more than anxious to show it off, I persuaded him to whip me off to Dallas. The ride was exciting, but a little too much for my tired old bones, and the feel of solid ground beneath my feet was wonderful. I bade my speed demon friend farewell and headed for that famous eating place, the Lanctot Lasso, owned by the king of the cowboys, George Lanctot. After ordering a rare, five inch thick steak, the specialty of the great cook, Wallace Darling, I settled back to look at the acres of oil wells which dotted the landscape. My musing was interrupted by the conversation of two young women behind me. They were excitedly talking about that new oil tycoon in town, Red Lazarus. My that name rings a bell! Good old Red! Hadn't seen him since he was starring for Mr. Quinn's great '58 team. I was so excited over the prospect of encountering an old pal that I left without eating my five-dollar steak. I soon obtained directions to Red's ranch, the "Lazy L," and was on my way in no time at all. As I drove up to the "Lazy L," Red's foreman, tough Tom Buonomo, came charging up on his midnight black stallion. I explained that I was an old friend, so Tom led me to Red's office. As we entered, Red was dictating to his secretary, Frances Affleck, the latest returns from his oilwells, and Ken MacNeill, top stockbroker in Texas, was busy recording the rises in the cattle market. Just then, another secretary, Diane Bennett, came in to announce the arrival of Ernest Beer, who was to audit Mr. Lazarus's books. I finally realized that trying to get to chat with Red was a hopeless case, so I left and went back to Dallas. It was there that I caught a rocket to San Francisco. After a very brief but pleasant flight we landed at the terminal in downtown San Francisco. During my travels, I had heard quite a bit about the new Smog Research Center, under the direction of chief pharmacists Paul Farrell and James Conners. The Department of Dental Health was headed by Mildred Wallace, famed D.M.D. and her assistant, Carolyn Howe. The Department of Lung Research was under the direction of Dr. Patricia Ferro, M.D. and Ph.D., whose assistants, Helen Grimes and Mary Scalia had just completed a prize winning report on this phase of smog research. I was unable to visit the center, however, because the smog was so thick that the research had to be discontinued for that week.

My trip had been wonderful and exciting, but I was anxious to get back to Waltham, so I made reservations on the next cross-country jet flight. At the Space Port I met Virginia Orpin, who was headed for Boston to make her dancing debut at the Carruthers Carnival, which was to open there in a few weeks. Traveling with us was the U.S. Efficiency Staff, Mary Giugno, Tina Spagnuolo, Judy Doria, and Judy Hepler, who had just returned from Japan and China where they had studied the economic systems of these countries. We all cheered with joy when the stewardess, Marsha Cain, announced that we would soon be landing at the Mazzone-MacLellan Space Port. Minutes later, we were on the ground, and I headed for a phone booth to call a taxi. The operator, Joyce Spooner, connected me with Fred Durkin's Dynamo Drive, and I was soon speeding back toward Waltham. I wearily climbed the stairs to my apartment, unlocked my door, sank into the comfortable old easy chair, and with a deep sigh, slipped off to sleep. Suddenly, I awoke with a start. It seemed as if I had been in a deep trance, but as I looked about, I saw that everything had returned to normal. The magazine was still lying in my lap, opened to the governmental report on space travel. Wow, that really was quite a dream!! . . . or . . . was it a dream???

SHOPPING FOR A JOB?

CHECK WHAT YOU WANT:

- ☐ Good starting salary with regular raises
- ☐ Pleasant work with other girls and young men
- ☐ Prestige of a responsible job with a well-known and respected company

If your list shows three checks, then you should check into what the Telephone Company has to offer you. Smart girls are doing it now, before they graduate from high school. Come in and see our employment interviewer soon. You'll enjoy talking with her.

Act now, and you can say with pride, "I'm all set! I'm going to work with the Telephone Company!"

See the Guidance Counselor at your school, and talk first with her about when and where to apply.
